Reconciliation

Oxford Dictionary of English has three definitions:

- 1. the restoration of friendly relations: the earl was seeking a reconciliation with his wife.
- 2. the action of making one view or belief compatible with another: any possibility of reconciliation between such clearly opposed position.
- 3. the action of making financial accounts consistent; harmonization: the reconciliation process should be consistent with the business strategy.

(Coulthard 2014; Oxford dictionary 2014)

1. The restoration of friendly relations

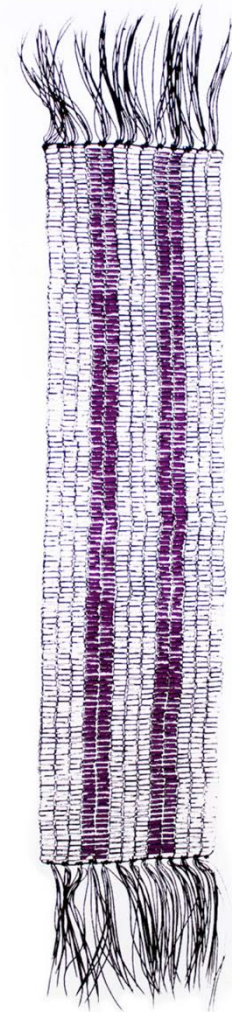

Chief Dr. Robert Joseph, Reconciliation Canada (2019)

- E.g., reconciling past and ongoing injustices
- Everyone needs reconciliation in Canada
- A person needs to be willing to reconcile for it to happen
- Individual responsibility to educate ourselves about history
- Can be unsettling

(Regan & Alfred 2010; Reconciliation Canada 2016)

2. The action of making one view or belief compatible with another

- Mutual respect, making amends, each with something to offer
- Acknowledging Indigenous knowledge and rights & title
- Equity & levelling the playing field
- Moving forward together with a new relationship
- Strive for co-existence

3. The action of making financial accounts consistent; harmonization: the reconciliation process should be consistent with the business strategy

- Making a payment or an agreement as an end
- Moving forward without change
- Could be an example of what reconciliation shouldn't be – a platitude (Joseph, 2019)

Community-up approach to ethical partnerships:

- Doing their homework
- Be a familiar face
- Be humble, don't flaunt your knowledge
- Be cautious
- Don't trample on the dignity of another person
- Look, listen, then (maybe) speak

(Harris & Pizzirani 2019; Smith & Cram 2001)

Summary

- Everybody has a role to play in reconciliation
- A collaboration framework includes levelling the playing field, change, and going past status quo
- Reconciliation should be thought of as an ongoing journey, not an end
